WASH POST: SHAHEEN SUPER PAC COORDINATION "A NEW LEVEL OF BRAZENNESS"

Super PACs and campaigns can't talk to each other. Here's how they get around it.

Sen. Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.) has an "Important Message for New Hampshire" that sure reads a lot

"More attack ads. Paid for by the Koch Brothers and their special interest money. More proof big oil, the Koch Brothers and Wall Street think they can buy our Senate seat for Scott Brown," reads a section of Shaheen's campaign Web site that oh-so-closely resembles a 30-second ad script and - not to mention - includes high-resolution images and research that documents its claims.

Welcome to the super PAC era, in which coordination between well-heeled outside groups and congressional candidates is forbidden.

It's the timing and the packaging. Shaheen seems to almost be saying exactly what she wants the ads to say, which is a new level of brazenness.
